Letters to the Void

Dreams.

- February 27, 2025

As a kid, I always thought about the reason to be alive. I think we need a reason to live. It can be anything, as simple as a favorite spot. Man has always looked up at the stars and wondered if the stars are tingling, or if that is just a refraction. Why is it that we look up and wonder? Can't we just eat, drink, live, and die? No, man is never satisfied with a life like that. We need something, something that can give us a reason to live. Something extraordinary, maybe a dream. Are you a dreamer, dear reader? Well, I am. I don't really sleep; I just dream. Maybe we all are dreamers. I think the most beautiful thing in this world is a dream. But what really is a dream? Is it some sort of escape from the world? I don't really know. I don't even know why we dream. Is it for the same reason we look up at stars?

Recently, I read "White Nights," a masterpiece by Dostoyevsky. He told the story of a dreamer, but what really astonished me was the way he ended the story. There are no happy endings in reality. In the real world, we suffer. But isn't it beautiful, the suffering? Sometimes a man is passionately in love with the suffering. And I think that really is the essence of this life. We suffer, and as Nietzsche said, "To live is to suffer, and to survive is to find some meaning in that suffering."

Karl Marx

- March 17, 2025

This time, I want to talk about Karl Marx's philosophy. I have read many philosophers, but no other philosopher has ever astonished me the way Marx has. The way he explains everything is just magical. If you have read his book Das Kapital, you'll notice that he starts with the very basic concept - a commodity. From there, he builds his philosophy step by step in a logical manner. In Das Kapital, he analyzes how capitalist economies function, ultimately concluding that they are unsustainable. There's no denying that his ideas have shaped the modern world in ways few other philosophers have. For those who don't know him, here's a brief introduction.

Karl Marx was a German philosopher, economist, and revolutionary socialist. Born in 1818, he spent most of his life analyzing capitalism and its effects on society. He collaborated with Friedrich Engels, and together they wrote The Communist Manifesto, a work that became the foundation of socialist movements worldwide. His magnum opus, Das Kapital, critiques capitalism in detail, arguing that it inevitably leads to exploitation and class struggle.

Second Half

I don't agree with everything he proposed, but I believe that reading thinkers like him is essential to understanding the forces that have shaped our world. In the end, I want to thank Dr. Taimoor Rehman for helping me understand the ideas of this complex philosopher. I've included his video here for those interested. Let's conclude the discussion here.

Dr. Taimoor Rehman's explanation of Karl Marx's philosophy & Das Kapital.

Great post! I really enjoyed how you broke down Marx's ideas in a way that's both accessible and thought-provoking.
